To "My dear Friend" Anne Warren Weston

Dublin, Ireland. The writer regrets that the addressee was not in Paris when he was there. "I never enjoyed any visit since my courting days half as much as that to Versailles." Refers with enthusiasm to "these women whom I have held in the highest respect and admiration" (Mrs. Chapman and Caroline Weston). Comments on Dr. (W. H.) Harvey's book on marine botany. Of the two boxes for the Anti-Slavery fair, one contains stationery, the other "odds and ends from Dublin." Anything for the North Star should be sent at once, "to keep Douglas from suspecting us of robbing him." The largest contributor is Maria Waring. The writer sent Fox's Martyrs from his own library. Expresses his attitude toward "Popery;" considers Father Mathew "one of the best of the lot."

" ? " The writer characterizes James Haughton as simple-hearted man who would believe anything. "Father Mathew is not to be compared with James Haughton for real nobility of character, and he is not worthy to tie Garrison's shoes." Gives information about the articles contributed to the Boston fair. Mentions among the donors Mrs. Edmundson, sister of Eliza Wigham; a Miss Phebe Mary Henzell, who is an admirer of F. Douglass; the writer's cousin, Deborah Moore; and Maria Waring, whose "kind of munificence is not common with us." A child's muff was made by the writer's daughter Anne, not yet eleven years old. The writer sends copies of an index to his Anti-Slavery pamphlets.

Leeds, England. The writer says he is sending a box of contributions for the A-S Fair. Apologizes for its small size, saying that there are so many other charitable demands on the people of Leeds that the Abolition cause fared rather poorly. The writer would like to know the customs charges on the box. Says William W. Brown is coming to lecture in England. Speaks of his brother's tour. Thinks that Father Matthew went "sadly astray" and should not have come to the U.S.. Praises Rev. James Martineau. Says that many of his friends in Liverpool disapprove of Garrison's harsh language. He told them that they would use the same language if they were in Garrison's situation. Asks if the northern States favor annexation of Canada.

There was a display of articles at their house. A few things went to Rochester. An excellent collection for Boston was made by Glasgow friends. She cannot, however, engage in raffling. She is in western Connecticut. In this state the field is "now clear of the traitorous enemy, -he has gone to his true place, the arms of Hunkerism." 25 Chauncey Place, (Boston) & Weymouth (Mass.). "We opened the Fair last Monday & our receipts up to now are about $2400". The Westons had an easier time than last year. "I am so tired of the whole affair..." Praises the work of the Loring's. Describes the dreadful storm on the day when the boxes from France had to be unpacked. Relates the damage done to certain objects unpacked, and the devices for getting them restored. "Ah, thought I, I can't lay down my life over those boxes." Records who presided over and helped at the various fair tables. Tells of a troublesome non-abolitionist who assisted, and the commotion caused by the writer's protest. Mrs (Evelina A.S.) Smith, who came in for the day, told about her ailment, but feels encouraged. "The Book Table never was handsomer." Thinks that not many of Douglass' Life will be sold. Emma Card 2 (Weston) has been dreadfully missed at the fair, more than the others. Speaking occurred only once, by Wendell Phillips. Mary (Chapman) received a letter from Mrs. (Joshua) Bates, saying that they would go to Paris if Mr. Bates could get the time. Expecting a long court mourning after the death of Queen Caroline, Mrs. Bates charged Mary (Chapman) with sending her black crape. Tells in detail about a visit to the fair by Miss (Frederica) Bremer, describing her appearance. "On these occasions Maria and Mrs. Follen are greatly missed." The writer refused to advertise in the Republican because it had united with the Emancipator, and "the latter paper was ours, had been basely taken from us." Tells about visitors to the fair and gives news of acquaintances. Discourses on Shirley (by Charlotte Brontë).

Portland, Me., "I see by the report of our Annual meeting that Mr. Phillips's motion for a committee is represented as having for its object only the raising of funds ..." The writer thought it called for a discussion of Anti-Slavery principles. Wants the Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society to issue an address to the whole country. Will leave Mrs. Olds's subscription to the Liberty Bell with S. May Jr. The writer's daughter is sick. Talks about the Portland sewing circle. "Sarah Southwick is its soul ..." Will try to collect money from General Dow.

New York. The writer tells of the results of "a tour of finance." Collected contributions from Rebecca Spring in Ohio, T. D. Weld and J. G. Birney. Remarks on the long absence of Birney and Weld "from our columns as co-operators." Objects to the use of her name on an Anti-Slavery Bazaar call, because she disapproves of raffles. "I will try to write a bit for the Bell, but I have great doubt of succeeding ..." Asks the addressee to say nothing about her services to the cause. To Anne Warren Weston

.(Dublin, Ireland). The writer has received a letter from Caroline Weston, who wants him to tell the addressee about the "explosion of zeal on the part of certain Glasgow ladies." Remarks that "such women as those of Glasgow are not to be reached by reason." Believes that the Rev. Mr. Pennington was at the bottom of the plan to divert money from the fair to the N.Y. Committee of Vigilance. Eliza Wigham fears that as a result of the circulation of the (Glasgow) letter, the Edinburgh Aid Society may send nothing to the bazaar this year. The writer comments on Scotch bigotry. The Estlins have gone to Switzerland with the addressee's "faction." The writer wishes he could join them. Has been [redacted] to write for the Liberty Bell. 16 Richmond St., Glasgow (Scotland). A letter introducing William Symington Brown. "... we were very happy to find that our articles for the Bazaar were approved of & saleable". Mentions a material which was donated by Robert Reed, brother of Mary Welsh. The writer hopes she will have the chance to meet Mrs. M.W. Chapman before she returns home. H.C. Wright's letters in the Liberator are causing "a great shaking among the dry bones of orthodoxy." Speaking of a letter to Wendell Phillips, the writer says, "It is easy for him to shout his heretical notions in the west of Ohio, but a very different thing in this religious city".

To "My dear Madam" (AWW)

•Bristol (England). The writer tells what he knows of Julia Griffiths. Believed that she was more interested in F. Douglass than in the Anti-Slavery cause. Speaks of "the amusement which the 'Liberator' affords me." Does not show it to those whom he wishes to instruct in the true state of Abolitionism in America. Tells of a case in the Thames Police Office, London, of a colored sailor suing his captain for wages withheld from him while he was imprisoned in Charleston Gaol. A.L.S. 7 p. 1 & 8 x 5 in.

New York. Arrived with Anti-Slavery friends. Rained during most of the trip. Heard news of G. W. Benson at Springfield. W.L.G. expects trouble at the anniversary meeting in the Tabernacle because of the inflammatory articles in the New York Herald by James G. Bennett. Continuing the letter after the meeting, W.L.G. reports a triumphant, though tumultuous, gathering. A mob was led by Capt. Rynders, but W.L.G. finished his speech on religion and country, and was followed by W. H. Furness, F. Douglass and Samuel Ward.

To Mrs. W. C. Barolay

Dublin (Ireland). The writer claims that the sentiments expressed in the circular signed by Mrs. Jane Barolay and others (item no.8 ante) amount to an abandonment of the Anti-Slavery cause. The funds of the American Anti-Slavery Society are not employed to support the Liberator. "Neither Mr. Garrison nor Mr. Wright is subject to any control but that of his own conscience in the expression & formulation of his own opinion. Nor should it distress you if those who differ widely from you in religious opinion, are energetic & sincere in their efforts for the overthrow of slavery." "... The vast majority of the white population of the United States are either actually slaveholders, or so inclined to slavery that they cling to a constitution which by means of its provisions guarantees the maintenance of the system."

However, on second thoughts, she found among her memories the first shock that revealed to her the nature of slavery. The writer had counted on taking her little consignment herself to the addressee, but the heat and the uncertain health of Mlle de Mongolfier? prevented her. To "My dear friend"

[A W W]

„Dublin (Ireland). The writer tells of getting a letter from the addressee, and meeting J. Haughton while reading it on the street. Haughton was "very indignant with Joseph Barker for disturbing people's faith ..." "Whittier may be a third rate or a fourth rate poet. I don't at all care. But I like his poetry." Doesn't like Byron or his poetry, but thinks well of Lady Byron. "I like Southey ..." Refers to his bad handwriting. Says that Lucia Weston reminds him of a green parrot. Mentions his great affection for J. B. Estlin. Praises him for his appreciation of Garrison's "extraordinary purity and goodness." Praises Mary A. Estlin. "Miss Carpenter has a long, solemn, sad face and is not the least handsome." "She is a devoted partisan of the ragged schools."

Mentions the Philanthropist and its successor, the National Era. Seven years ago the Sewing Circle was organized to help the fugitive slaves. The writer wants to organize a Garrisonian society in Cincinnati. Would rather do this than work with the Salem group. Wants the constitution of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Says that many Sewing Circle members fear to join a Garrisonian society because of the churches. "The cholera although not as bad as last year is very fatal ... and more intense this summer than I have ever known ..." Mentions Douglass's visit and praises him. To the Committee meeting Aug. 1, 1850

No.18

(Edinburgh) Expresses the earnest desire to help, and belief in the principle of immediate emancipation. Sorrowfully the Society feels compelled to withdraw from connection with the Boston Society because (1) "sentiments we conceive derogatory to the character of the Bible have been brought forward on the anti-slavery platform..." (2) because "the leading advocates of that society in America have given utterance to sentiments which...are infidel..." (3) because "by holding such fellowship we could not expect the blessing of God to rest upon our efforts." Includes also the minutes of the Committee of August 1, 1850, which contain the resolution that "no box of contributions be any year sent to the Boston Bazaar under the auspices of the committee." „Biebrich (German). The writer is enjoying this lovely place overlooking the Rhine. Today they have wandered through the gardens of the palace, and "longed for Miss Weston to help appreciate them." Writing later from Antwerp, the writer tells about sailing down the Rhine and the journey to this city. Dwells on her remembrance of "the past weeks of delightful intercourse (with the addressee and her family) it has been our privilege to enjoy" and the treasured "sweet association". The writer refers apologetically to the disappointment she felt at not meeting Mrs. Follen. Expresses gratitude for the addressee's patience in communicating her views. Describes the harbor crowded with ships. The American flag is conspicuous among them & colored sails abound."

To "Miss Weston" Anne Warren Weston.

Bristol, (England). A letter about donations of money and merchandise (Honiton lace, books, bookstand) to the Boston Bazaar. The books were labeled Mrs. Geo. Dighton and Mr. H. Dighton. The writer asks that a report be sent to Mrs. Hayes, wife of a liberal clergyman of the Church of England and sister of Sir Henry Lawrence and Captain Lawrence. Requests that the services of Mr. Ayers and the blind people be mentioned in the reports of the Bazaar. The continued indisposition of her father has prevented the writer from finishing the packet sooner. Was pleased with the writer's reply to Miss Wigham (see letters No. 23). Wants to hear more about the disturbance at the Guild Hall meeting. Miss Wigham assured the writer that the addressee's letter has "pro-

«Bristol (England). The writer's father is still incapacitated by illness. She thanks the addressee for allowing her and her father to see the addressee's correspondence with Miss Wigham about the objections raised by the Glasgow Abolitionists to the attacks on the Free Church and the Bible by the American Anti-Slavery lecturers. It is hard to explain the structure of the American Anti-Slavery Society to the English and Scotch Abolitionists. "... nothing analogous has ever been experienced in this country under their observation." The writer longs for the addressee to be here to answer the criticisms of the Glasgow people in person, or, failing that, to submit a written explanation of her views. The British contribution to the Boston Bazaar may decline, although Bristol's donations are maintained. The writer is busy with the preparation and exhibition of the box for Boston. Included in the box will be letters about the effect of the Glasgow circular. Mentions letters by Mrs. Massie who is critical of J. Scoble. On the writer's list are 24 names of Anti-Slavery correspondents. Suggests that these could be inserted in W. W. Brown's Description of His Panorama of American Slavery. Tells of an appeal that the writer's father had been preparing for W. W. Brown. Calls attention to a life of a Welsh bard, copies of which are being sent to the Bazaar, which contains "a very strong anti-slavery lesson." Tells of the place that the addressee has in the writer's mind and affection since hearing so much about her from her sisters.

To Rev. Samuel May Jr.

Providence, R.I., The writer says he has a son dying of consumption. Does not want his last letter sent to Bristol in answer to Rev. Armstrong's letter. Claims Rev. May misinterpreted the words "sometimes spoke against the usual observance of the Sabbath." The writer meant that it was not usual for lecturers to speak on secular subjects on Sunday. Differs with Rev. May on the proper observance of Sunday. Thinks Abolition doctrines should be taught along with ordinary Christian doctrines. The writer will not stand in the way of the Bazaar and will urge others to support the Abolitionists.

at Clevedon near Bristol, (England). The writer has forwarded the correspondence between Miss Wigham and Anne W. Weston to care of Messrs. Green, Paris. "People are so impressed with Miss A. Weston's liberality ... that I do hope they will be enlightened by her clear explanations." Expresses interest in the Fugitive Slave Law. Wants to see what the Boston clergy will do in response to the colored citizens' appeal. Discusses Russell Carpenter, mentioning the coolness of his manner. The donation of Mr. Lupton of Leeds to the Boston fair contains work of Harriet Martineau. The writer has been trying to interest people in Anti-Slavery cause and in W. W. Brown. G. Thompson sails for Boston the 19th. The writer tells & Clevedon near Bristol, (England). The writer thanks the addressee for her interesting letters, and refers to her account of Swiss scenes. Mentioning a visit to the blind naturalist, (Francis) Huber, tells of letters written to S. May, Anne W. Weston and others. Wrote to F. Douglass, "expressing regret at his money having been hazarded in the 'North Star.' Miss Julia & Griffiths wrote to me, but her, I did not answer."

The writer also had a little tilt with Joseph Barker. Discusses the attitude of Russell Carpenter. "I think he was anxious to get at the truth of the slavery question; that he adopted the best mode I cannot say." Wonders what George Thompson will do in America. Questions the propriety of a British Member of Parliament's taking an active part in the politics of a foreign country. The writer has read in the Liberator about fugitive slaves, and has been "rather aroused by the counsel of the 'Non-Resistants' who advise them to abstain from violence-unless they see no objection to it themselves!" Expects F. Douglass to "come forth in a conspicuous character." Comments on the political situation in France. A.L.S. 6 p. 7 7/8 x 4 7/8 in.; 8 1/4 x 5 3/8 in.

«Dublin (Ireland). Comparing himself with Mr. Estlin, the writer says that he never had a college training, and that he was brought up a Quaker. Wants to know how George Thompson will get on in America, and is eager for an account of the meeting in Faneuil Hall patronised by Edmund Quincy's father. The fair contributions from Dublin will go in the box from Cork. If Mrs. Chapman could spend the next winter in England, there would be some chance of her exerting influence valuable to the cause. The writer read in the "British Friend" of the "rascally way the Quakers in Philadelphia behaved to two very orthodox brethren from London" who tried to hold a meeting to interest Friends in the anticipated West Indian negroes. The writer's sister, Deborah Thompson, with her husband and six children, may be in or near Boston. Mr. Thompson having failed in business, the family has migrated to America.

Leicester, Mass.. The writer disagrees with Dr. Hall about the emphasis on the word "usual" in the clause "sometimes against the usual observance of the Sabbath." Argues at length about Dr. Hall's statements. Says the Abolitionists preach an Anti-Slavery Gospel and are therefore as clearly entitled to hold meetings on Sunday as any church congregation. The writer also adds that the fact Dr. Hall's sermon might have antagonized the Bristol contributors was not as important as the risk of letting its accusation go unanswered. Boston. The writer discussed the addressee with Garrison. "I saw plainly enough that Garrison was hurt and wounded by the course you had taken with regard to the Chronotype." Apparently Thompson had written out one of his speeches for the Chronotype, a newspaper edited by Elizur Wright, who was hostile to the Garrisonians. The writer and her friends felt much slighted. She criticises E. Wright and the Chronotype severely.

To "My dear Friend"

298 Apsley Place, Glasgow (Scotland). The writer announces the shipment of a box of contributions for the Boston Bazaar. Says that the amount of merchandise is not less than was sent in 1849. Her society has taken no notice of "the opposition started against us." Those who are hostile to the Garrisonians never did much for the Anti-Slavery anyway. "The Fugitive slave bill is exciting great interest here, there was a meeting got up the other night by the working men of Glasgow ...". This meeting sent a protest to the Scotch-American workers in the U. S.

Those who disagree with Garrison on religious grounds formed a new society called the Glasgow Female Association for promoting the Abolition of Slavery, and they contribute only to the New York Vigilance Committee, with whom Dr. Pennington is connected. To Anne Warren Weston

•(Bristol, England?): Discusses the shortcomings of "clerical abolitionism". Defends Edward Mathews as one doing important work and not lacking in integrity. "His absorbing desire seems to be to purify the Baptist Church from slavery." The minister, Mr. Davis, who has been "undermining E. Mathews by all sorts of false reports...was an antagonist of Miss Weston for a whole evening here." British abolitionists "must have a practical channel in which to direct any sympathy we may enlist." Mentions the need of a paper. They are doing what they can to keep people on their guard against John Scoble, whose ally is Lewis Tappan. British abolitionists cannot reject all who have not renounced political action. The writer emphasizes that "our machinery consists only of religious organizations" (Continued on next card)

? The writer visited the Estlins, who are considered "a little wild when they begin talking about your faction." Says Dr. John B. Estlin has done more for the Anti-Slavery cause than anyone else in the United Kingdom. Mentions a letter from Dr. Estlin to Anna Richardson "in defence of Garrison & the Am. A-S Society, and pointing out the comparative uselessness of the Free Labor movement." Met an uncompromising Non-Resistant at Derby named George Sunter. Visited his daughter's boarding-school at Chesterfield, and Joseph Barker at Wortley, whom he tried to dissuade from emigrating to the United States. Comments on the letters between Harriet Martineau and Henry G. Atkinson. [redacted] ses Anne W. Weston's report of the Anti-Slavery fair.

cPark St., Bristol, (England). The writer congratulates the addressee on the success of the Boston Anti-Slavery Bazaar, "in spite of the defalcation of the wealthy Whig purchasers ...". G. Thompson spoke at the Bazaar in spite of Garrison's objections. The writer is well satisfied with the Garrisonians' acknowledgment of Bristol's contributions. Praises the reports of the Anti-Slavery fairs. Thinks more explanations should be given as to exactly what the contributions are used for. Neither Mrs. H. Thomas nor Mary Carpenter read Anti-Slavery literature, "both of them are confirmed by Russell cCarpenter, in their vague ideas of the Abolitionists being 'very injudicious, intolerant &c., &c.'" The writer could write a book about the Carpenter family. Discusses at length a letter from one of the Westons in Paris to J. B. Estlin, describing the symptoms of an illness. Dr. Estlin couldn't understand the letter. The writer discourses at length on drudgery and the trials of illness. Was very glad that the leatherwork sold so well at the Fair. Says her father is much troubled by rheumatism. Tells about caring for him. "He goes to sleep over H. C. Wright's letters ..." Prefers the National Anti-Slavery Standard to the Liberator. "Mr. Quincy always excites our mirth ..." Regrets not having heard Jenny Lind sing. Says that the English are becoming skilled at distinguishing between the true and the false American Abolitionists. Tells of a plan to write letters on this subject to the newspapers, which was proposed by Mrs. Massie. Dr. Estlin objected to Mrs. Massie's deleting a reference to the American Abolitionists from a letter he sent her. Mrs. M. later asked him for an article for the Morning Advertiser of London, whose editor, named Grant, was a friend of hers. W. W. Brown had a great success in Glasgow with his Panorama. W. and E. Craft were also at the Glasgow meeting. Speaks of a plot entered into by H. H. Garnett and Mrs. Richardson to undermine the good feeling now existing in Scotland toward the Garrisonians. Dr. Estlin will complain to J. Scoble about his failure to account for funds collected for the Anti-Slavery cause. strong also attended, and which was brought back^{to} life by Mrs. A. and the writer. The society ordered the Nat. Anti-Slavery Standard to be sent to Miss Tribe. The writer reports on how the members feel about Garrison. She revived the society in the expectation that Mrs. M. W. Chapman and the addressee will visit Bristol. Tells of receiving a badly-written letter from R. D. Webb proposing a partnership in foreign correspondence. Postscript contains a reference to the Unitarian clergy.

Says that the English are readily repelled by the language which the Abolitionists have to use, and that they don't feel that the Anti-Slavery cause is their own. Comments on Mrs. Follen's poor health. Miss Cabot is somewhat eclipsed by Mrs. Follen. Mrs. F.'s son is studying chemistry at the University of London. Refers to J. B. Estlin's artiole about the Fugitive Slave Law. Mrs. Massie is the wife of an anti-Garrisonian minister, and the writer praises her for her Anti-Slavery zeal. Mrs. G. Thompson told the writer that her son was dying of consumption. Mrs. Massie said that G. Thompson had no chance to be re-elected to Parliament. The writer's sister, Deborah Juliot, visited the Westons. Tells about two Abolitionists, a mother and her daughter, who live in Manchester, and helped Joseph Barker when he was falsely arrested. The writer's brother-in-law returned to Ireland. Expresses pity for a Mme. Bardonneau. Says that S. May Jr. notified him of the approach of the Anti-Slavery fair. The Estlins think they can undo the influence of the British & Foreign Anti-Slavery Society in Bristol. Says his youngest child is in bed with influenza.

To "My Dear Friend" A. W. Weston:

Syracuse, N.Y.: The writer tells of speaking to a convention in Peterboro, N.Y. F. Douglass praised his speech. Spent the day at the house of Gerrit Smith, whom he praises. Met S. S. Foster at Canastota, N.Y., who wished the writer would "stay and be mobbed with him that evening." He declined and proceeded to Syracuse where he was met by S. J. May, whose home he describes. Gives the high light of the Syracuse meeting which included introducing five fugitive slaves to those present. R. Purvis brought three of them. The audience shows disapproval of the Fugitive Slave law.

«Dublin, (Ireland)». The writer reminisces at length about his boyhood friends in the village of Balliton, which was "a little Quaker Athens." Mary Shackleton, a survivor of the family that owned the school which the writer attended in Balliton, is an invalid, who nevertheless is planning to leave her congenial home surroundings and follow her niece's family to Ohio. As she will pass through Boston, the writer asks the addressee to see her or to arrange for someone to do so. The writer thinks that the addressee would enjoy her "picturesque, racy conversation." The writer describes Joseph Parker and his happy family who are "knit together by the isolation which J. R.'s heresy has created around them." Comments on the attitude of "Fillmore, Webster, the Boston Corporation & the American aristocracy."

Weymouth, (Mass.). The writer received the addressee's letter about Warren Weston and is glad that he is "trying active remedies ..." (for some unnamed ailment). Gives news of the family in Weymouth. Tells about getting Robert? Rantoul interested in "a slave case (Thomas Sims)" and how his subsequent acts embarrassed Caleb Cushing and the Whigs. F. Dexter wrote to Judge Shaw urging him to grant a writ of habeas corpus. Prayers for Sims were sent all over Massachusetts. Rev. J. Perkins would only deliver the prayer if Sims were "unjustly detained." The writer tells about the preaching of Rev. Dean from Quincy, of whom she disapproved. "Edmund Quincy?" spoke in the worst possible manner of young Josiah's anti-slavery, that is, said he was not the least of an abolitionist & you would have thought he was talking of a person in George Ticknor's state of mind." "Hervey Weston?, said in his pigeon letter that a few orthodox ministers prayed for Sims, but Huntington, Coolidge & Young did not." Wendell was five hours in the police court fighting over the two Snowdons". Mentions added train service and the resignation of Joe Lampson and others from the Old Colony Road. Talks about the failure of Sheriff Coburn to arrest a man for a stabbing in spite of considerable financial inducements. Gives an account of a Free Soil convention, of which R. French was the chairman and W. Phillips the principal speaker. "The military are talking
